Peterborough — As part of its comprehensive plan to build a modern and connected mental health and addictions system that meets the unique needs of individuals, families, and caregivers, the Ontario government is approving a new Consumption and Treatment Services site in Peterborough. The site will provide residents in Peterborough and the surrounding area with access to addiction services closer to home.

"Building a connected mental health system, from prevention to recovery, is a critical component of building a stronger and healthier Ontario," said Christine Elliott, Deputy Premier and Minister of Health. "Ontario remains committed to working with communities to establish a network of programs and services in areas with the greatest need to save lives and connect Ontarians with life-saving treatment and rehabilitation services."

The new Peterborough Consumption and Treatment Services site will be located at 220 Simcoe Street and will be operated by Fourcast, a community-based addictions treatment provider in Peterborough.

Since 2019, Ontario has now approved 17 Consumption and Treatment Services sites in communities across the province. This model of service saves lives by preventing overdose deaths and connecting individuals who need it to addictions treatment, mental health services, primary care, and social services.

"We know that the COVID-19 pandemic has created new and more complex obstacles for Ontarians experiencing mental health or addiction challenges," said Michael Tibollo, Associate Minister of Mental Health and Addictions. "With this new site, our government is helping to ensure that Ontarians in Peterborough and the surrounding region have access to the high-quality mental health and addictions care they expect and deserve."
